

Dyslexia

(may affect up to 12% of the general population, to some degree)

Key characteristics:

- an unusual way of processing information, particularly phonological information
- the ability (or tendency) to make unusual connections between ideas
- issues with memory, especially auditory memory and working memory
- slower-than-typical speed of processing
- issues with organisation – both of ideas and daily activities

For more information and support, see

- ELT well
- The British Dyslexia Association
- PATOSS

